GREEK SPIRIT

One of the few instances on record in which "history" as such has played a direct part in the destinies of a race is that of the formation of the modern Greek people. Men for the most part pay no attention to the past, except as a momentary pastime or as the subject of anecdotes over the wine or the pipe. The modern Greeks, however, each and all made a daily and hourly use of the past of their country to enlist sympathy throughout Europe with them in their struggle to gain freedom from the Turks.

Byron and other romantic minded students of Western Europe helped them out. The Turks were anathematized as the successors of the Persians in tyrannizing over the people who had given Sophocles and Phidias and Plato to the world. The city of Pericles, the world was reminded, was enslaved to the nomads of Asia. The traveler from London and Paris was met on the streets of Athens by children who were named Theophrastus or Xenophon or Timoleon. Europe writhed with anger at the thought of the descendants of the most cultured race on earth acting as bond servants to a Tartar tribe.

Then after a few decades, when the Greeks had their own government and were getting quite arrogant in their dealing with the Sultan, scholars began to express the opinion that the modern Greeks are no more descended from the compatriots of Pericles than are the present Americans descended from the Americans Indians. With the exception of a very small and problematical intermixture of blood, the modern Greeks were said to be Slavic in origin, of the same class of people as those that inhabit the modern Serbia or Montenegro and who are akin to the Russians and the Poles. The heirship of the present Athenians from those of the time of Aristotle and the Jews was said to be a myth, or even worse, an invention.

But whatever may be the facts about the descent by blood, the modern Greeks have certainly continued to do their best to imitate the ancients in spirit. They have brought their language as nearly as possible to the classic Greek and have busied themselves in restoring the remains of ancient temples and other art treasures as they could, considering their poverty and the spoliation committed by the English and other vandals who have followed the Turks.

It is to be regretted that the greatest curse of the ancient Greeks seems to have fallen upon the moderns as well—their political incapacity. The Greeks of old showed themselves helpless to govern themselves in greater number than a few thousands, except when in the face of the greater foreign danger they might for a time forget their tribal feuds. Similarly, the Greeks of today are continually showing their incapacity for ruling themselves. The government at Athens is always in a turmoil. King, parliament, ministry and populace spend their time in intriguing. A country which might have, by careful nursing of its resources and prestige, gained the friendship and co-operation of the great powers in selling one by one the rebellious provinces of Turkey, has instead become one of the most despised of the minor powers.

FARM POPULATION

The proof given by recent publications of census returns that the rural population of the Middle West as well as the Far West States in this country have begun to mark time, furnishes a most striking answer to the questions regarding the cause of the rise in the prices of living. The number of residents of cities is increasing enormously. The rural population is standing still. The food of the nation is produced in the country, the process of preparation which takes place in the city not adding to the actual amount of food in the slightest degree. With an ever increasing demand and no greater supply, of course prices will rise, trusts or no trusts.

No improvements have been made in agricultural machinery in the last generation that would materially increase the amount of food that a given number of farmers could produce. Here is a field which will doubtless receive the attention of inventors to a greater extent in the future than ever before. The reduction of the cost in human labor actually producing food, on the one hand, and increase in the area of "intensive farming" such as truck gardening, on the other, will both tend to do away with the problems which the country life commission was named to investigate. Farming will be done in what are suburban rather than rural communities, and life in them will not be distasteful as it is in farms widely separated and lacking in social amenities.

HOW SHE COULD HELP HERSELF.

Dr. G. Herbert Richards, president of the Orange Board of Health, tells this one:

"A beautiful young man was driving with his best girl one cool morning. The young lady used all of her art to make him 'swoon,' but failed, and, despairing, became silent and preoccupied."

"What's the matter?" asked the young man, when the silence became oppressive.

"Nobody loves me," said the young man, "and my hands are cold."

JOHNSON WILL ADDRESS
VOTERS OF SELMA THIS FORENOON

Bell Will Devote His Time
This Week to Speeches
in Tulare County

Republican Committee Has a Meeting Planned for Every Night

TODAY'S PROGRAM.

Hiram W. Johnson, Republican candidate for governor, will speak today at the following places:
Selma, 10:30 a. m.
Hanford, 1:45 p. m.
Tulare, 4:30 p. m.
Visalia, 8:00 p. m.
Johnson's party is traveling by automobile, driven by Hiram W. Johnson, Jr.

Hiram W. Johnson and Theodore A. Bell will visit this section of the San Joaquin valley this week, in the final round of their campaigns. Neither, however, will speak in Fresno, but they will devote their entire time to other parts of the valley.

Johnson will speak this morning at 10 o'clock in Selma, from where he will campaign throughout the lower part of the valley, which was omitted when he came through here in September.

The meeting at Selma this morning will undoubtedly be an enthusiastic one and promises to be the largest political meeting ever held in the county outside of this city. The speaking will start at 10 o'clock.

Hiram W. Johnson arrived last evening on the Owl, and registered at the Hughes, where he retired for rest before beginning the strenuous trip planned for today.

The party traveling with the candidate arrived last evening in an automobile driven by Hiram Johnson, Jr. Mr. Johnson will use the machine in his trips today.

A number of newspaper men are traveling with the Republican candidate, their numbers including W. Russell Cole of the Call, John F. Neylan of the San Francisco Bulletin, Paul Herriott of the San Francisco Examiner and Leonard A. Compton of the Scripps League.

The Republican county committee has arranged for a rally tonight at Selma. The legislative and county candidates will be at these meetings. These will be the last which the county committee will hold.

A Republican meeting will be held at Reedley on Wednesday, at Clovis on Thursday, at Madison on Friday and at Elgin on Saturday in this city on Saturday.

Bell will not speak in Fresno county on this trip, but will devote his time to Tulare county, leaving Tulare Tuesday morning, speaking during the day at Exeter, Lindsay and Postville, ending with a night meeting in Tulare. A week from Tuesday he will speak in Coalinga and Hanford.

The Democratic county committee will hold meetings this week at West Park tonight, Selma on Tuesday and Madoc on Wednesday. No arrangements have yet been made for a meeting on Thursday, but on Friday and Saturday another automobile party will leave this city for Mendota, Los Banos, Firebaugh and near by places, ending with a meeting in Bryant precinct on Saturday night. The Democrats are planning to hold a meeting of Armenians in this city some time next week, the date to be named.

DISCUSS FREIGHT
SHIPMENT LOSSES

Espee Traffic Officials in Consultation Over
O. S. D. Claims

Thirty traffic officials of the San Joaquin division of the Southern Pacific gathered at the Fresno reservation offices last evening to discuss means of reducing the losses from "overs," and damage, technically known as "O. S. and D." material.

No new plans were brought up, but all trainmen were urged to use the greatest care in making reports, particularly at shipping points.

The losses from these claims, it is stated, amount to more every year than the losses by petty larceny.

"Overs" is the term applied to the extra articles when the amount received includes more than the manifest calls for, the extra articles being shipped by mistake. "Shorts" refers to shipments not including all the articles called for, while the third term refers to shipments damaged in transit.

Among the officials present last evening were Assistant Superintendent Rudy of San Francisco and J. W. McCall.

BAY CAPITALISTS ON
CRANE VALLEY TRIP

John A. Britton and Mr. Hockenbecker of San Francisco, capitalists interested in the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. were guests of General Manager A. C. Wilson of the San Joaquin Light & Power company, together with H. A. Power company, the San Francisco office of the J. G. White company, on a trip to Crane Valley.

The visiting capitalists showed great interest in the construction work going on in the valley. The gas company is planning to undertake similar work later on, and the trip was one to learn some of the methods of handling such work. The San Joaquin Light & Power company in this undertaking, which has attracted considerable attention from men and the disposition of the gas together with the placing of the cranes and other great pieces of machinery are considered object lessons by many engineers in the carrying on of such work.

Morning Unitarian Church
Sermon Traced Evolution of Religion

Whittier and his poems was the topic of a popular lecture at the Unitarian church last night, delivered by the Rev. Thomas Clayton, pastor of the church. The lecture was one of a series devoted to well known poets, was prefaced by reading of "Maud Muller," one of Whittier's poems, by Mrs. Williams. Rev. Clayton read extracts from the best known of Whittier's poems, including "Snow Bound," "Maud Muller," and his religious works.

The lecture, being devoted to a well known American poet, held more of interest than any of the series so far. Mr. Clayton expounded the uplifting concept of many of the poems and pointed out the fresh tone and primal force of them.

Special music was furnished as usual, the features being a violin selection by Miss James, which was particularly well received, and a vocal solo by Miss Zoe Rodden, also well received.

At the morning service yesterday, the sermon by the minister, Rev. Thomas Clayton, was on the subject of "The Evolution of Religion," to maintain that religion is an universal as man, as old as history; that all religions have sprung from the same roots, and form one of the vital elements of every civilization.

In his discourse the speaker said that the evidence that religion is universal is found in the study of primitive religions, of the existing savage life (now rapidly passing away), and are gathered from the traces of primitive religion found in the great religions that are dominating the world today.

As far as can be discerned in the dawn of history, religion began with the worship of "Heavenly Bodies." Men early discovered his dependence upon the sun, moon, water, fire, and other things. To his childish mind, all these natural objects were animated. He worshipped them because he had thought of them as living, and as having power to help or harm him. This idea gradually grew into the belief in spirits. In his dreams, man found himself wandering in strange places, and doing and saying things, as if he were not he, but some other person. He came to believe in his soul nature, as body, and soul, or spirit. After awhile, it seemed easy to believe that the dead were still living in the shadowy life of dream-land. Also, that dead had influence on the welfare of the living.

So developed the Ancestor worship, traces of which have been discerned in every religion known among men. It was easy to think of the spirits of the dead, as more powerful than the spirits of the living. The spirits of the dead, and all earthly objects, thus we find a very general worship of spirits among all races, and in all ages. These spirits came to be thought of as "good" and "bad" spirits, the last of which is the belief in the general belief (still prevalent) in angels and devils.

The worship of familiar natural objects, led to their being endowed with supernatural powers, and visions and visions of the heavenly bodies, and all earthly objects, thus we find a very general worship of spirits among all races, and in all ages. These spirits came to be thought of as "good" and "bad" spirits, the last of which is the belief in the general belief (still prevalent) in angels and devils.

A multitude of gods, of various kinds, then, was the first state of religion, and the worship of these gods was the first step toward the worship of one God. How did these gods become merged into fewer, and finally into one God? Just as the races became united themselves. At first we find family gods, then tribal gods, then gods of cities, and finally gods of nations. The gods were ranked according to the influence of the tribes of chiefs who were their special devotees. There were the chief and the subordinate gods. As kings became supreme, the exalted gods came to be the supreme gods. In many cases one god absorbed all the rest, as in Israel, Jehovah became their one God. We are informed that fathers worshipped many gods beyond the river. The Bible recognizes the gods of Egypt, Assyria, Syria and other countries. It never denies their existence, it only insists they are weaker than Jehovah.

Ultimately, each religion came to claim that its god or gods, were the supreme gods of the world. Today, the whole world is moving toward the idea of one, immanent and universal, Deity.

It is equally interesting to notice the development of the character of the gods. Some writer rightly says, "As in the evolution of a race, so in its religion." As mankind evolved toward better things, so they took their gods with them. Not always though, for some of the gods of the past were very bad. We think that the best race, the Jews, have far better gods than the heathen gods of the past. God, scarcely a Christian can be found who himself would console a soul to endless torment; yet most of them insist that their God will do this. They say, then, that our world is superior to some of the old religious ideas. But the churches are gradually becoming ashamed of their "Total depravity" and "Hell fire."

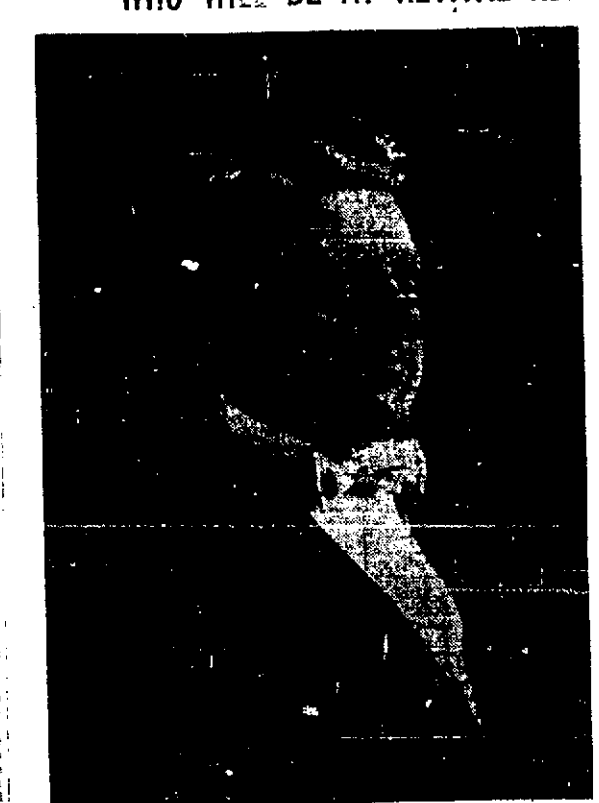

Early man was a savage, and both cruel and brutal in his nature. He was described his own nature to his gods, as an evil, ungrateful creature. Animals were like the animals that represented them, as were the human deities. In ancient civilizations, kings and princes were very despotic, and noted for fierceness and cruelty; so were their gods. Hence, when in a semi-savage state, the Hebrews represented their God as commanding them to slay all their enemies, including women and children. As kings burned offenders in the fire, and made them languish in dark dungeons from which they never issued again, it was very easy to picture the deity as having a great place, or Hell of fire, where he kept his prisoners suffering forever.

As man has grown "more kind" or "human," as we like to call it, he has felt less keenly the cruel character of his fathers' gods. But the curse of tradition is upon us, and few of the people of our race and religion have had enough of the old ideas, utterly unworthy of God as we now like to think of Him. We are now worshipping a "God of Love."

Can we find traces of the old religious ideas in the great religions of today?

Buddhism retains the sacred trees, or, in fact, the old idea of the tree of life, and is really only a development. Islamism, or Mohammedanism, has retained much of the ancient belief in the sacred Ka'ba, the Holy Zenn, the Holy Hamedan, the sacrifices of Mount Hore, and much Old Testament and Christian lore.

The ancient Hebrew religion borrowed much from Egypt, Assyria and Persia.

"Lyle Conner is endowed with musical talent above the average. He has a good voice and pleasing address."

CHURCH UNITY URGED
BY REV. CHARLES BEAL

North Side Christian Church
Holding Evangelistic
Services

Unity in church work was the topic of a sermon preached yesterday in the special evangelistic services of the North Side Christian church by Rev. C. L. Beal, pastor of the North Side church. The congregation met in the large tent erected on Van Ness avenue, large crowds being at every service.

"Men see only in the present," asserted Mr. Beal, "and make their plans on this short viewpoint. Gods plans are a part of the great, eternal purpose. The church, the called out of God, was in the plan of our Creator from the beginning of time, and works out into eternity. No human being sees its full possibilities. Every one."

The Jews owed much to the Greeks, and the Christian religion still more to them. All of them we find traces of the gods, animals, birds, trees, with mountains, caves, etc. We have in the Bible, as in the sacred scriptures, how ever much we may dislike to know it, the New Testament is Jewish, and the Jews, the true, the worship on mountains, etc.

The Lordship was practiced among the pagans and is doubtless related to all the primitive faiths in which the gods were supposed to be present at the festive board, on Easter, Christmas, May Day, and Halloween, all originated as festivals of the old nature worship, and were included in the newer religions that took their place. The same applies to the books and rituals of the new law, which have survived from earliest times, and undergone development. What value is it for us to know all this?

Will it not undermine people's respect for religion? Not with intelligent people. On the contrary, it reveals to us the vital importance of religion to human welfare and progress; and shows how much mental and moral struggle our present religious systems have cost. It demands respect for all religions, as man's struggle for life leads us to expect changes in religions, as not finished or perfect; just as we look for development in all the arts and sciences of life. Truth will be for ever unfolding in new forms, and giving us larger views of God and His universe.

INCURABLE CASE
(ANOTHER HOSPITAL CASE)

Authorities declare kidney disease incurable after the sixth month. This was the situation up to the working out of the new, efficient treatment, the only thing known that drove disease in sight to cure chronic kidney disease.

Every case presented has been declared incurable by physicians and in some cases four to six have joined in the fatal diagnosis.

Case of Mrs. H. S. Lathoy, wife of H. S. Lathoy, a business man of No. 506 Montgomery Street, San Francisco—Was so low with chronic kidney disease that the former Hospital authorities made no progress and gave up encouragement. Patient was taken home and put on the new, efficient treatment. Another case was taken to the hospital, and the physicians made no progress and gave up hope. In her usual habit of looking for life in her usual habit, although the case was supposed to be absolutely hopeless.

RAISINS NO LONGER A XMAS COMMODITY PRIMARILY

Half of the Crop Is Required from October 1st Until the New Year

Suggestion Made of a Growers' Pool to Maintain a Fall Market

Editor Fresno Republican—There has been considerable discussion through the columns of your paper on the raisin question. It is not the writer's intention to discuss the question today from the standpoint of either a Bull or a Bear, but the situation as it exists. The shipments of raisins from California, by land and sea, for the past four calendar years have been as follows: (Figures given in tons)

	1907	1908	1909	1910

From a careful study of these figures we make the following summary of the situation.

The fiscal year from October 1st to September 30th we figure is the real consumptive year of raisins, and the only fair way of figuring consumption, because the calendar year contains a part of two crops. Shipments for the past three fiscal years figured on this basis are as follows:

1907-53,000 tons; 1908-59,000 tons; 1909-100,000 tons. Each year showing a considerable increase in the consumptive capacity of the country.

Taking the figures of the first nine months for each calendar year for the last four years, they are as follows:

1907-51,000 tons; 1908-48,500 tons; 1909-51,300 tons; 1910-56,725 tons.

The last three months of the various calendar years are as follows:

1907-34,200 tons; 1908-27,750 tons; 1909-30,200 tons.

Figuring on the calendar year shipments, they are:

1907-55,000 tons; 1908-46,200 tons; 1909-51,300 tons.

The usual way of figuring carry-over on raisins is as of January 1st, which is unfair to the industry. One can hardly expect a twelve months supply of raisins to be taken in three months, because the carry-over is on October 1st of each year. Whatever is left then is a legitimate carry-over. We cannot expect to get decent prices for raisins if the farmers are going to insist on selling their entire crop in three months, because neither retailers, packers, are going to carry raisins for nine months in anticipation of their full fiscal year's requirements unless they can buy them at speculative prices, and that usually spells loss for the grower.

The real carry-over is on October 1st of each year. Whatever is left then is a legitimate carry-over. We cannot expect to get decent prices for raisins if the farmers are going to insist on selling their entire crop in three months, because neither retailers, packers, are going to carry raisins for nine months in anticipation of their full fiscal year's requirements unless they can buy them at speculative prices, and that usually spells loss for the grower.

In other words, raisins are eaten twelve months of the year, not three months. They are no longer a Christmas commodity alone, but they represent part of the daily family requirements throughout the year. About half of the raisin crop is required from October 1st to January 1st, the other half from January 1st to October 1st. If the farmers want a staple and reasonable market they have to face the issue, namely, that the grower, retailer, or packer, is no longer in position not to do as he desires to carry these raisins. It is up to the farmer, if he insists on the other three factors carrying them he has to name a price that spells loss, which is unnecessary.

In the past the various combinations have had hard sledding, because they asked the farmers to put in all their raisins in other words, the farmer was risking all, not part. We believe if an organization among the farmers could be put together to sign up only half of their raisins with the agreement that they would not be offered prior to January 1st except to the farmer's own market, and a demand for the goods, that the fall market could be maintained, that both grower and retailer would feel like buying and feel that they could do so with reasonably safety, which means they would be assured of a market for their goods. Consequently, the demand for the last three months of the year would increase, rather than decrease, by such a process.

These goods should be put in warehouse, warehouse receipts issued, arrangements made with the banks to finance them, the same as is done on wheat and other cereals throughout the United States. If the entire United States grain crop were forced on the market within ninety days after harvest, the same results would take place, namely, very low prices, in fact, far lower than necessary to market the crop.

Since the panic of 1907 a spirit of conservatism has spread across the United States. There is less speculation in all classes of food products than formerly. Buyers of the various houses are being watched more closely. They are criticized more severely for excessive stocks than formerly. The market on raisins today is weak. They can be bought anywhere from 2 1/2 to 3 cents according to quality. We regret to say that a large percentage of this year's crop is of poor quality, as compared with former seasons. A large amount of poorly dried and rain-damaged stock is coming onto the market for sale. That helps to pull down the price of the good stock. Even if there were no damage, we would be doing business on a weak market with the present methods of marketing raisins. Some years the market has been held up by the short sellers being forced in to buy, but without short sellers we are bound to do business every fall on a weak market, if the growers insist on selling their entire crop in three months.

We are not arguing from the standpoint of this year, because it is too late to do anything. This year's crop will have to take care of itself the best way possible, but another season we believe if the growers will pool half of their crops, leaving the other half free, that the demand for goods will be sufficient to maintain good prices on the amount offered, because every pound will be needed for Eastern shipment prior to January 1st, and it can be marketed just as quickly at 2 1/2 to 4 cents on a well maintained market as it can be on a 2 1/2 cents per pound basis on a weak market.

You can not ask the grower East to believe in a market that the grower does not believe in himself. He can not ask the grower to help sustain a market that the grower does not help to sustain. Prices are made by supply and demand, not by either the grower, retailer, or packer. If the grower can control the supply, he can control the price, but without a control of the supply, he can not hope to control the price, either this year or any other year.

There has never been a year when a greater Bear pressure was brought upon the market by the short sellers than during the summer of 1910. To start with, the beginning of this year there was a row among the packers. Part of them owned a large block of raisins, the other part did not, and the other part flooded the country for months with all kinds of conditions, letters, telegrams, personal visits, advising growers not to buy, telling them that chaos was about to ensue, telling them that by waiting they would save money; consequently, there was no particular desire on the part of the grower to buy goods. He did not push them on the retailer, the retailer did not push them onto the consumer. Later on in the year when the time came to sell the 1910 crop there was a large short interest, that has never since been equalled. The market was that day to this, and in spite of a ten months' hammering, the consumptive demand of the United States, according to records of shipments by land and sea, as furnished by the various railroads and steamship lines, the largest shipments in the history of the raisin business. What would they have been had everybody pulled together? No larger, because the entire 1909 crop and the carry-over from 1908 were shipped out of California by October 1st of this year, but the crop would have been cleaned up a good deal earlier. The farmers would have had their money, the banks theirs, the merchants theirs, probably ninety days ahead of the time they actually received it.

There is no use asking the packers to lie down in peace and harmony, as long as they compete with each other. The question of whether the packers pay 2 1/2 or 3 1/2 cents cuts very little ice with the packers, because they get a certain profit above the price they pay, no matter what that price is, but the question whether the packers pay 2 1/2 or 3 1/2 cents makes considerable difference to the growers; consequently, the growers have much more to gain by pooling half of their crops than anyone else interested in the raisin business. Furthermore, such a pool would do away with short selling, or speculation of any kind, because in that case the average packer would be afraid to take chances. The jobs and the retailers East could buy the goods with a feeling of security, which is not the case today. With half of the packers telling the growers not to buy, and half of them telling them to buy, there is a certain doubt in the minds of the grower as to what is best to do, and they usually do nothing, or buy as little as they can, and with that feeling on the part of the buyers this season you can see that they have taken a very large amount of raisins, which tells its own story.

As to the strength of the present market, and the possibilities if the growers would get together another season and pool at least half of their crop. If there were such a pool formed it would not be my idea that any set of packers should be appointed, no agents, simply the price would be set and the goods offered to whoever desired to buy, and possibly a scale of prices, one price for one car, a price for twenty-five cars, as the case may be, or an encouraging the buying of larger lots on the part of the packers.

There is no use discussing the sins of packers or of growers. The respect will not help the present situation. We believe it is the future that should be dealt with, and that is an expression of views on the plan outlined in this letter, after a careful study of the figures submitted.

Yours very truly,

HENRY MILLER APPEARS TONIGHT IN AN EMPHATIC COMEDY SUCCESS

Curtain Will Go Up Fifteen Minutes Earlier to Permit Staging of a Famous Playlet of Twenty Minutes' Duration

Henry Miller, who appears tonight at the Barton in "Her Husband's Wife."

Henry Miller will appear at the Barton tonight in his latest success, "Her Husband's Wife," which was the most emphatic comedy hit in New York and Chicago last year, and which enjoys the reputation of being the only American play produced during the season which received a unanimous verdict of approval from the critics of both cities.

Henry Miller has devoted his talents exclusively to the production of serious plays during the past ten years. It is significant that the first comedy offered by him since achieving fame as a producer of the delicate drama stage story, "The Wife," is not only brilliantly witty and absolutely unique, but Mr. Miller has assembled and drilled the most remarkable comedy cast that has ever appeared in his support. As a result, the delicate drama stage story, "The Wife," is presented at lightning speed and the author's witty lines sparkle and emanate, but are never permitted to degenerate into the clumsy slurring of the ordinary farce comedy. The New York and Chicago critics declared "Her Husband's Wife" really belonged to the category of farce but that the superb manner in which it was staged and acted elevated it to the realm of high comedy.

The story of the play concerns a young wife who is an almost hopeless hypochondriac. She declares herself that she is about to die, and declares that she will pick out her husband's second wife before she is taken from him. Her choice falls upon a girl who is quite "nice" but rather dowdy—not at all the sort of a girl who will make a lady forget wife number one. The second wife, elect, however, blossoms out in a Parisian costume and proves a regular bird of paradise, heretofore disguised. The husband pays her marked attentions, which makes the first wife furious, and causes her to decide that she will not die after all. The duel between the two women is deliciously funny. Mr. Miller appears as a California millionaire who is visiting the home of the wife, and who is involved in the hilarious domestic complications. Relieving that the only way to make a woman happy is to keep her well supplied with trouble, the Californian adds confusion to the existing complexities. In the end, however, the visitor from the Pacific coast manages, by a stroke of genius, to restore peace to the Eastern home.

Preceding the performance of "Her Husband's Wife," Mr. Miller will offer his famous one-act play, "Frederic Le Maistre," which is lately revived in San Francisco, and which has never been seen here. As this delightful little sketch adds nearly twenty minutes to the evening's entertainment, it will be necessary for the curtain at the Barton to rise sharply at 8:15 instead of 8:30, as was the custom during the New York and Chicago runs of "Her Husband's Wife." The role of Le Maistre is one of Henry Miller's most celebrated characterizations and presents a striking contrast to his new comedy success, furnishing an exceedingly interesting demonstration of the actor-manager's versatility.

NEW TO THE STAGE
No English speaking actress of today compares with Virginia Harbord as an emotional actress, according to the opinion of the New York critics, and in "The Woman He Married," which she will offer here at the Barton next Thursday evening, she has splendid opportunities to demonstrate her worth. "The Woman He Married" is by Herbert Bachford and describes a phase of New York life now to the dramatic stage. Miss Harbord declares that the drama is the greatest vehicle she has ever had since her star turn with E. H. Sothern and wife in "The United States and in London in "Iris," "Spirits" and her other phenomenal successes. The seat sale for Miss Harbord's engagement will open this morning at 9 o'clock.

SELMA DEMANDS MORE ROOM IN HIGH SCHOOL

H. W. Johnson Will Address the Voters This Afternoon For An Hour

SELMA, Oct. 23.—In response to an urgent need for additional room in the high school it seems evident that Selma's voters will sanction a call for bonds sufficient to give the Selma Union high school district buildings in keeping with the wealth of the district and standing of the school.

The trustees have for some time been considering the advisability of asking for a bond election, and their action is deemed to call for the bonds was hastened when they received a joint letter from the faculty setting forth pertinent reasons why no time should be lost.

The communication from the teachers shows that there is only one classroom in the school at this time that does not lack the seating capacity for the normal number of students in attendance. In one room the overflow number is thirty-five, while in the assembly room it is thirty-nine. The one room which has no overflow is a small mathematics room which has a student for each seat.

In order to provide class rooms it has been found necessary to sacrifice laboratory rooms, so that neither physics, botany nor physical geography have separate laboratories. Additional rooms are also needed for agriculture, drawing, commercial subjects, gymnasium, and dressing rooms.

The trustees have been interviewing patrons of the district and they report that so far they have met with no opposition but found an enthusiastic sentiment in favor of the improvements on every hand.

When it is considered that there are six school districts in the Union high school district, and that the total property valuation by the assessor is almost four million dollars, it is evident that twenty-year bonds will demand only a small tax.

The principal Republican political event will be the visit of Hiram W. Johnson, on Monday morning to address the voters at 10:30. Most of the stores have agreed to close during the hour of the speaking. On Tuesday night the Democratic rally will be headed by Cartwright and Gallagher.

Heiden Warner, who spent the latter part of the summer in Canada, has returned to his Selma home, accompanied by a sister.

Wednesday for their home in Wisconsin after a visit with George P. Christ and family.

EVERYBODY FOR JOHNSON IN VALLEY, SAY THE CITY MERCHANTS

Everywhere Evidences Were Found of the Support
For Him

Traveling Men Predict His Election By a Majority Overwhelming

In addition to witnessing the beauties of the valley and forming acquaintances with San Joaquin Valley business men on their tour of the lower part of the San Joaquin Valley, the members of the Merchants' Association of San Francisco took advantage of the occasion to inquire to some extent into the political situation in regard to the fight for governor. All were astounded at the result of their investigation and while in Fresno remarked that they could see and hear nothing but Johnson in the lower part of the valley.

Edward L. Baldwin, a prominent druggist of San Francisco, was one of the number to venture an opinion as to the situation in the various places he has visited.

"I was greatly surprised at the number of Johnson supporters I found in every community," said he, telling of his experience. "Everywhere we went, the people seemed to be united for Johnson. There is not much talk, but on every hand are evidences of Johnson support. This valley is certainly going to roll up a big majority for Johnson at the election."

"And people certainly did things for Johnson in the primaries," remarked another San Franciscan, a member of the party. Continuing, this same man stated that he believed this section would do even better in November, if the situation does not change.

These views were not expressed by professional politicians, but by men who were in the valley on a social and business visit.

There is one class of men in the state, that probably comes into contact with as many different persons as any within the borders of California, and predictions made by these men are generally considered to be of value. This class is the traveling men who visit every city, town and hamlet.

Four years ago these men predicted the election of Gilbert by a small majority. True to the primary election party, in August they predicted the nomination of Johnson by an overwhelming majority and now they are predicting the election of Johnson by an overwhelming majority. The opinions expressed by these men in regard to the political situation are practically unanimous, with an exception only now and then in the case of Bell. Another class predicting the election of Johnson is the traveling freight and passenger agents for the many railroads. These men assert that there is not much talk, but add that when an opinion is secured from those who are not talking, invariably they have found that it is for Johnson. "The silent vote is going to roll up a big majority for Johnson," said one railroad man.

Except in the case of a few partisans, the Democrats of this county are generally conceding that Johnson will carry Fresno county. One Democratic county candidate is working on the assumption that Johnson will carry the county by not less than 1000 votes, while others though of the same mind, will not name any figures.

Even money is being wagered extensively in San Francisco that Johnson will carry the state by 50,000. At first, Johnson men were willing to wager even money that he would be elected by 20,000, but developments of the past week or ten days have led them to become more optimistic, with the result as mentioned.

AUTO TURNED TURTLE; THREE PERSONS HURT

Workmen Did Not Put Out
Warning Lights Over
Open Trench

VISALIA, Oct. 23.—An auto accident near Farmersville last night almost resulted in fatal injuries to three Porterville men returning to that city from Visalia. A contractor, name not learned, had dug a ditch almost across the road but had not placed any lights. The auto, a Buick, approached at a fair rate of speed and climbed the dirt pile turning up and then went into the ditch, throwing over the shoulder and James Robbick and H. Erickson, the other occupants of the auto, were badly bruised. J. H. Crockett, manager of the Visalia Electric railroad, coming to this city from Exeter, was only prevented from also going into the ditch by his lamp showing a large pipe stretched across the road. He took the three men to Exeter, where Dr. McLean reduced the dislocation of White's shoulder. Later, Crockett brought the three to Porterville. The machine was badly wrecked.

A line hung at the ditch by Crockett prevented A. R. Carney and other autoists from also going into the trench later. Much feeling was expressed against the person or persons responsible for the open ditch.

An interesting meeting of Visalia Grange was held this afternoon in Visalia hall. Interesting papers were read by D. R. Downing on the Watsonville apple show, and by Mrs. J. C. Good on "An Other Possibility of the Pure Food and Drug Act." Arrangements were made for the reception of the County Pomona Grange to meet in Visalia next Saturday. The county grange is composed of the Visalia, Tulare, Orsi and Dinuba Granges.

Henry Wells, an inmate of the county hospital for the past year, is confined at the county jail and will be examined as to his mental condition. Wells made life miserable for inmates of the place. The first National bank is occupying its enlarged quarters. Many changes have yet to be made on the interior, including the establishment of a new set of fixtures.

A PECULIAR SEASON FOR RAISIN GROWERS AND SHIPPERS

Latter Are Doing a Greater
Business Than Done
One Year Ago

Extraordinary Showing Is Made By Transportation
Line Figures

On the subject of the raisin situation, the commercial department of the San Francisco Call quoted yesterday morning "a heavy house in the California raisin trade" as saying the following of market conditions:

"This has been a very peculiar season for both raisin growers and shippers, as early in the season there was a big difference of opinion, even among the shippers themselves, as to the year's outcome."

"While it was generally believed the crop would fall somewhat short of that of a year ago, the percentage varied anywhere from 5 to 35 percent, though it is pretty generally conceded at the present time that it will be about 25 per cent less than 1909."

"Certain of the packers, believing that the crop would be but little, if any, short of a year ago, have been consistent bears from the beginning of the season, and in their efforts to keep the market down to a level consistent with what they thought it ought to be, it is reported that they have sold freely, but judging from the cost in the primary market, such sales have been for the benefit of the grower, only as there have been few opportunities this year to buy goods in the west-box at prices that would admit of selling sound or loose raisins for the prices that were ruling when the heavy sales were made."

"We have heard continual talk from certain interests of dull trade, slack demand, and that the jobbers were not interested, and yet in the face of all this the railroad statistics of shipments to date show that they have been record breakers."

AN ACTIVE MOVEMENT
As there was a heavy carry-over of raisins, which, however, were offered at exceptionally low prices, early sales in the trade were made at figures that were attractive enough to induce heavy buying.

The trade now the shippers realized or anticipated the fact that the goods were going into consumption at a lively rate.

"The reports spread early in the season of a big crop, which were later found to be incorrect, possibly had some effect for a time in curtailing consumption, but it was short-lived at best, for consumers realized that raisins were about the cheapest things on the list and their demand for goods compelled the jobbers to purchase freely."

"Figures submitted by the transportation companies show that in 1909, there were something over 1600 tons of raisins shipped out of the state, and in May, 1910, over 1900 tons; while in June the difference was more pronounced. In 1909 during the latter month there were over 1900 tons shipped from the state, while June of this year shows over 3000 tons, an increase that is simply remarkable. This indicates one thing very decidedly, namely, that raisins are gaining in popularity and are being more widely distributed than ever before. In July, which is usually considered a dull month, the shipments for last year were something over 1100 tons, while for 1910 they were over 2400 tons, a gain of 1300 tons, something over 3400 tons, while in August of this year over 8600 tons. When we take into consideration that the two months named are from a dried fruit standpoint considered the dullest of the year, these figures are worthy of the most careful consideration."

A BEAR CAMPAIGN
"The campaign for lower prices was most actively waged during the month of September, and no stone was left unturned to convince the buyers of the country that delay in purchasing would make them money and that they would get the goods later at a lower price if they only held off. Again the raisin shippers answered these arguments by taking hold heavier than ever before, as shown by the transportation companies' returns, which are over 7900 tons for September of last year, and over 9500 tons for September of 1910. The same tactics have been pursued during the month of October, and the figures given show that for the first half of this month the shipments were greater than that of last year by over 600 tons, and we believe the balance of the month will show an equally surprising increase."

"The above figures, furnished by the transportation companies, are available to anyone who cares to investigate, and are therefore beyond question, and a perusal of them will convince any one that apparently the only people who believe that the crop is an enormous one and that prices will fall to an abnormally low figure, are the people who are dispensing the information."

ADVANCE LEGITIMATE
"There has been no boom, nor any attempt, so far as we can find out, to create one on any commodity this season. The advance that has occurred on most lines has been because of the demand for the article, and while the reports of the past week are quite uniform in that business is quiet, when the matter is pressed home, nearly all shippers report they are doing more than a year ago."

RAISINS CONTINUE QUIET; CRISIS NEAR
Actual Amount of Business Being Done
Is Almost Nominal

The raisin situation has developed into a matter of waiting for the most part. Fluctuating on the line being made by fruit trains between the Coast and Chicago and other Eastern points, about November 10th is taken as a time when the sale will be told, so far as the future of the right game this year. In other words, it is held that the jobbers who have to cover for holiday requirements will be forced to buy only in early November to have the goods on the ground by Thanksgiving.

The actual amount of business being done is almost nominal, with advances from the East showing raisins quiet, but held rather firmly.

The looked for report of the Chamber of Commerce in the raisin situation this week is expected to be a deciding factor in the game.

WILL START ORANGE TRAINS ON TUESDAY

Superintendent Matcalf States Local Yards Handle Trains Better
Than for Any Season

Beginning tomorrow morning at 2 o'clock the special fast orange trains of the Southern Pacific will start East on their daily rounds. The trains run through here from the Southern California district, picking up local shipments for Chicago and other Eastern points on a specially arranged schedule. Assistant Division Superintendent J. W. Metcalf was here last evening and made a brief inspection of local yard conditions. He expressed gratification at the way the trains are being handled, and stated that the passenger trains are being handled according to schedule better than in any previous year, although the operating expenses are no heavier.

FIVE MORE I. W. W.'S JAILED BY POLICE

Five members of the I. W. W. who sought to publicly voice their grievances and sentiments at the corner of J and Mariposa streets last night in violation of the city ordinance, were placed under arrest and lodged in the county jail by the police. There was no demonstration attached to their arrest, and very few knew they had been arrested. Alfred Nelson, one of the men locked up, told Judge Briggs a few days ago he was not an I. W. W. and wanted to leave town. He was given a float, but was again locked up last night as he was endeavoring to speak for the I. W. W. With the arrest of these five men, there are 44 members of the I. W. W. in jail. The total number of prisoners in jail is 112. The I. W. W. men arrested last night were Frank Hammond, Charles Olsen, A. J. Tuley, Alfred Nelson and Charles Grant. All were charged with disturbing the peace.

WHY?

We have grown to be the largest store in our line. Why? Because the people found our goods and prices right. We can afford to sell goods for less money. Why? Because we have the best location in town and the transient customers that are attracted by our show windows and prices more than help to pay our expenses— Because it costs us less to sell $100.00 worth of goods than any one in town— Because we watch our business and the market so closely that we buy large quantities at low figures. We visit the markets of this country, we go to look for good things and find them.

A Few of the Good Things That We Have:

- Morris Chairs from $3 up to $75.00
- Rattan Rockers, large size, well made, $3.00
- Sanitary Couch and Pad, both, good, $7.00.
- Draperies for your windows as low as 45c yard.
- Carpets, sewed, lined and laid as low as 15c yard.
- A fine rug, one that will wear, $1.00
